Rio Janeiro, Brazil, Jan. 23 .- The Brazilian turret ship Aquidaban has been sunk at Port Jacarepagua, south of Rio Janeiro as the result of an explosion.

Four rear admirals and 192 men perished.

The Aquidaban had been used for FRANCE the accommodation of a number of supernumary officers and men attached to the flotilla escorting the cruiser Barroso. The Barroso had on board the minister of marine and his staff who were inspecting the sites proposed for a new arsenal.

The explosion on the Aquidaban occurred in the powder magazine. The vessel sank in three minutes.

The Aquidaban was 4,990 tons displacement and 6 200 horse power. She was built in England in 1885 at a cost of $1,725,000. The armament consisted of 4 9.4-inch guns, 4 5.5inch guns and a number of smaller guns. She had five torpedo tubes. Venezuela. Her crew numbered 350 officers and Manager Roberts has booked "The Clansman" for February, 1907.

Manager Roberts will admit ladies free to the theater again tonight. The Jewell Kelley company is the attraction and "Lights and Shadows of London," the bill.

R. G. Thomas, one of the members of "The Clansman" company, here recently, who has the role of Gen. N. B. Forrest, fell in an epileptic fit at Louisville and was carried-into the physician's office frothing at the mouth and unable to speak. His face was bruised and bleeding from time. An ambulance was called after attention had been given him, and he was taken to the Fifth Avenue hotel. He was able to go to Frankfort with the company.

"A True Kentuckian" was presented to a large and well-pleased audience by the Jewell Kelley Stock last night. The company is in a class by itself and is far superior 25c to many attractions playing at a dol-5cc lar. There will be matinees Wednesday and Friday. Ladies will be admitted free tonight upon the usual conditions.

Among the many brilliant scenes that the production of "The Holy City" presents, none is more sensationally superb than the one in which Salome, the beautiful daughter of Herodias, dances before King Herod and his court. In diaphanous drapery, kaleidoscopic as butterflies' wings in rainbow rays, its folds rising and falling around and above her nimble feet like clouds caressed by summer winds, bending and swaying in harmonious motion to the enticing music played, the royal dancer floats like a bubble on the palace terraces, bewitching the intoxicated monarch who first offers half his kingdom, but finally grants the head of John the Baptist, as a reward for sensous delight. Pasqualina De Voe the Italian tragedienne, especially engaged to play Salome in the East, gives to the difficult role that fire and intensity which the character demands. At The Kentucky Satur-

This is only one of many instances of where thousands of dollars could be saved the taxpayers in second-class cities, if the word "shall" were only changed to "may" leaving to necessity or prudence, many things that are now imperative.

One of the new bills proposed in the legislature is making the magistrates of a county the tax book supervisors. We hope there is no chance for this bill to pass, as neither the law nor the makers of the law ever intended that men elected by the people to judicial offices should fix the amount of taxes these same people must pay. Magistrates are dependent on the good will and votes of the taxpayers for their jobs, and the supervisors now are not. Which would be more apt to try to cater to the people in the matter of equalizing assessments, a man who depends on these same people for his job, or one who is absolutely independent of

Speaking of supervisors of tax books, there is no excuse for any man's being put on a board of supervisors who does not thoroughly understand property values. There are men in Paducah and this county who can come within a few hundred dollars of telling what any piece of property in the city or outside the city in the county, is worth, and such men, if they are honest and trustworthy, are the ones who should be put on a board of supervisors. If such men are not put on such boards, it is the fault of those who appoint them.

Brookport has fixed saloon licenses at $1,000 a year, and the three saloon men are alleged to have agreed to retire from business rather than pay the license. This will not, however, prevent some enterprising outsider from paying the license and getting the business, hence the Brookport council is probably not

This Week in Congress.

Washington, Jan. 23 .- Interest in congress this week will largely center in the statehood bill, which will come before the house on Wednesday, according to the present programme.

The first action will be a test of strength between the socalled "insurgents" and the "stalwarts" in the vote on the rule, which will accompany the bill, for the purpose of preventing amendments. The "insurgents" want this rule defeated, and predict that they have votes enough, combined with the 137 Democrats, to do it. The "stalwarts" make just as strong assertions to the contrary. If the! rule is defeated, it is the plan of leave out altogether the provisions for statehood for Arizona and New Mexico, or to provide that the question of statehood for these two territories shall be left with a referendum provision to be settled by a vote of the citizens thereof.

The merchant marine bill and the pure food bill still hold their places on the senate calendar, but both of those measures give place temporarily Monday to a discussion of the railroad rate question.

A $1,250 SERMON.

This is What Chicago Pastor Got as Reward For Rebuking Society.

Chicago, Jan. 23 .- The "Kirmess Sermon" in which Dr. Sydney Strong pastor of the Second Congregational church of Oak Park, compared society women of Chicago to half-naked sensualized heathen women of Africa, won for the minister an increase in salary. When Dr. Strong delivered his scathing rebuke to Chicago's exclusive set his services were valued at $3,000 a year. The attitude of the pastor was strongly indorsed and the trustees met and voted him an increase of $1,250 a year.

HUNG JURY

THE INDIANA INSURANCE. CASE—WAS THE SECOND TRIAL.

Jury Could Not Agree On the Amount of the Fine-Court Notes.

The jury in the case of the Commonwealth against the Interstate Life Assurance company, of Indianapolis, Ind., this morning in circuit court reported that it was unable to agree, after having had the case since yesterday morning, and was discharged.

The case was one of several suits brought under a special statute to collect a penalty of $500 from the company for rebating. Its former agent, M. G. Caldwell, is alleged to have rebated in several cases, and claims that he did so by order of the company, while the company claims that if he rebated it was withcut its knowledge and consent. A former trial resulted in a hung jurv also.

Dons Overalls and Works With Other Apprentices.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 23 .- George Westinghouse, Jr., son of the famous inventor and manufacturer of electrical appliances, is working as an apprentice in the Westinghouse airbrake plant at East Pittsburg. The young man, who is the sole heir to his father's vast fortune, has decided to learn the electrical business and he entered the plant of his father on the same ground as the hundreds of other apprentices who have preceded him. He graduated from Yale last year, and after a rest from his studies, entered the plant a few days ago. He carries his dinner to the works in a tin pail, and is the poorest dressed and grimlest man in the plant. He has no privilege over the other apprentices.

NEW ROAD

Is Preparing to Build Into Owensboro, Ky.

Evansville, Ind., Jan. 23 .- The proposed Chicago, Indianapolis and Evansville railroad has begun a survey for a bridge across the Ohio river at Owensboro, Ky. Because Evansville refused the road certain terminals to this city, the company threatens to make Owensboro the terminus. Chicago and Kansas City capital is back of the road and it will pass through the coal fields in central and southern Indiana. The promoters contemplate a main line from Chicago to Evansville, with branches from Crown Point to Toleston, and from Logansport to South Bend and to Owensboro, Ky.

FILL "SLID" SOME

The City Will Have to Take Steps to Protect Caldwell Street, leading to the I. C. passenger depot, was weakened some by the heavy rain Sunday and "slid" about six inches, but fortunately did not interfere with traffic.

The fill showed weakening on the west side just north of the second bridge going out, this being the bridge which is in a dilapidated condition and which will shortly be replaced by a concrete arch. A big crack of about six inches in breadth is plainly visible from the street cars and cabs traversing the street, but the slide was not enough to dislodge the fence. .

Several years ago during the high water season the fills at both bridges gave way and traffic over the street was suspended several weeks on this account. It is feared that the fill may give again if something is not done before high water again, and the city was notified of the matter last night by residents who had discovered the break. The fill should be well riprapped.

CHAPTER XIX.

VOR CASTLE, as I have explained more than once, was perched upon the heights that crown the western precincts of the Gwent. Beyond it and still farther west the forest descended into nether valleys that led toward a district of mines and furnaces. Sercombe and Hood might have secreted the treasure in any square yard of this broken tract of many miles. The chance of happening upon it save by the guidance of some clew was extremely slight, nor did we know in which direction to look for a clew. From our eyrie on the saddle of the bill we looked out across the eastern valley. In any cranny of that rough and precipitous forest the gold and the jewels and Sercombe's Greeks might be at this moment stowed in waiting for a safe conduct across the "Beat the Gwent!" had been Sheppard's phrase, and that was very much what our expedition must come to. We descended the wooded slopes upon the northern face of the gorge, dropping slowly from the castle. Few roads traversed this region - one, in parts but an open track, running the length of the spur into the plain, the others merely tracks of grass crossed and recrossed by footpaths through the great wilderness. The Gwent was very sparsely settled, and the only tenants of these regions were a few wood cutters scattered among the huts throughout the forest. It was into this silence and desolation that we plunged in the early hours of the night. Darkness hung about us, convoying our steps with blacker shadows from the copses. At first progress was leisurely and the walking (through a plantation of pine fairly easy. We had designed to strike a road that ran over the spur south ward, mainly out of a whim of Shep pard's that he could determine if any carriage had passed that way.

"These tracks are unfrequented," he explained, "not a pair of wheels once a week, and I'll guarantee if Sercombe drove this way, which leads naturally to the station at Vreachan, he has left his marks. There was rain last night."

I had not so much hope myself, but his plan was the only one before us, and so we directed our steps toward this crossroad. Down the valley came the cry of a cock pheasant, and then with a whizzing and whirring of wings a covey salled out of the deeps, be came a momentary buzz about our honds and disappeared into the bracken beyond.

"We didn't startle those," said Mont-

"How do you know?" I asked, though the matter seemed indifferent.

"Oh, I know pheasants!" said Montgomery emphatically. "They've been scared down in the bottom there."

'You mean"- I began. "Don't let's talk so loud," urged the boy. "There's some one down there."

The notion put new blood into us all. "No noise this time," said I, in warning, "and no discovery. Let us go ahead slowly.' It was impossible to proceed through that bracken without some sound, the fern lay so thick about our legs. But we moved with the atmost caution, silently making for the distant patch of forest whence the pheasants had started. No word was spoken be tween us, but we communicated by gestures, which were just visible in the faint starlight. Drawing close in this manner, we halted at length upon the margin of the spot over which our suspicions brooded. Sheppard crawled stealthily forward, and after a time we followed him. He caught my arm and pointed to the ground.

"Some one has passed here," he whispered. "We're on a side track." "So much the better," I answered in the same voice. "We shall make less noise in walking." With that we resumed our way with the same microscopic caution, and must have covered, as I should guess, about the quarter of a mile, when suddenly Sheppard came to a pause.

"Hear anything?" he murmured in my ear.

I shook my head. "I believe they're just ahead-several of them," he continued. "Step lightly, for heaven's sake!" I needed no reminder, nor did Montgomery. We were like a church service for solemnity, and crept rather than walked as we stalked closer upon our prey. All of a sudden Montgomery, who was walking just before me, dropped on his knee and moved his band back to me. I followed his example and crawled on all fours toward him.

"What is it?" I asked. "There's some one behind that tree," he whispered, pointing to a huge oak some ten feet from the path.

There ensued a deep silence, and then, just as I began to find my position intolerable and was thinking of changing my feet, a twig cracked in the forest, and there came a noise as of feet among the dry leaves.

"What shall we do?" he asked. To say the truth, I had no idea, but it was plain that if we had been seen, concealment was of no further use, and if we had not, that the spy could not now discover us through the undergrowth. So we resumed our path, rather speedily, and caught up with Sheppard. He came to meet us in a state of excitement, laying his arms upon our shoulders and drawing our heads together.

"Hood, as I live!" he cried in a whis-"Did you see him?" we both spoke at

"Yes, he came from behind me and rossed just in front. I had barely time to fall, and the light just took him in the eyes. We're safe now."

Our hearts were full of trlumph. and we pushed on with no more talk. It was possible that he had not seen us, but I doubted that. If he had, he would throw his party forward with greater speed. We were now, however, upon his track, and we were sat-Isfied, and each man loosened his pistol and girt bimself for the eventual encounter. That Hood would show fight I had no doubt, and it was more than probable that he would endeavor to trick us. We must be on the watch for treachery. We wound along the track for the better part of an hour. now getting news of the enemy and egain leaving space for them to get away when our neighborhood seemed in peril of discovery. We had agreed to postpone the attack until the party reached its goal. If Hood had not seen us (and I was now disposed to believe that he had not) that goal would even tually be the hiding place of the treasure. This was how we comforted our selves, and upon this faith our spirits rose to a high pitch. By this time we had lost count of our direction in the innumerable windings of the path, but apparently we were now mounting a hill, and I judg ed that it lay somewhere to the south of the castle and toward the southern threshold of the Gwent. We were proceeding with our customary diligence and precautions when a noise of feet stamping on the earth assailed us, and round a corner came a posse of men and fell upon us. I drew back and lifted my revolver. Already Montgomery's rang out on my right-and then the light of the moon shooting through the trees, which in those parts were sparse, fell upon the face of Jones!

"Jones!" I said, in a voice in which dismay, fury and disappointment

The man in front of me dropped his band. "You, Mr. Greatorex?" he asked sharply. "How do you come here?" "God knows," I replied angrily. "And what are you doing"- I stopped suddealy, for the next face that came into my line of vision was the black, impassive face of Hood.

"May I ask, sir, what brings you out tonight on this expedition?" asked Jones, pulling out his execrable pocket-through the forest in a mutual and imbittered silence. I think there was little conversation between us on our journey back. The sergeant used us very curtly, as if he would imply that we were defendants upon our trial. But one thing he did say, and that, as Sheppard remarked afterward, without giving us the customary warning.

"I should like to ask you, Mr. Greatorex," he said, "what you want with Captain Sercombe?"

"I want a good deal," I answered bluntly. "I want to warn him that he is wanted on a fatuous chacke by a very obstinate and blind eyed officer.'

"I don't think be needs that warning. sir," said Jones after a pause and somewhat dryly.

BROOKPORT SALOONS

May All Close Because of $1,000 \ License.

Is Brookport to be without saloons? The saloonists say it will if the city doesn't reduce the city license to $500 per year, the figure at which it originally stood.

At the last meeting of the council the license for retail liquor dealers was raised to $1,000.

At this figure the saloon men declare they can't pay expenses, and that unless something is done they will close their places of business on the third of next month-the date on which their present licenses expire. It is said all three of the local dealers are in an agreement to this effect.

A petition has been circulated by 179 signatures, was presented to Mayor Pell yesterday.

Senate to Draw His Mileage From Government.

WASHINGTON NOTES

Washington, Jan. 23 .- The question of regulating railroad rates occupied practically all of the time of the senate yesterday notwithstanding no bill with that end in view has been reported from the interstate commerce committee.

Aldrich indicated his purpose to oppose such legislation as that outlined and declared Hearst was the author of a proposed bill to confer the rate-making power on the com, mission. He also took occasion to declare that signs of the times point to the naming of either Hearst or Bryan as the next Democratic presidential candidate, but when pressed to indicate the probabilities in the Republican party, he declined to next Monday. make a prediction and also avoided answering a query of Bailey as to whether President Roosevelt would be candidate for a third term.

One of the most remarkable procedures in the history of the senate occurred in order to avoid the technicality which prevented Senator Burton, of Kansas, from drawing his mileage from the present session. In order to have his requisition honored it is necessary for some official of the senate to take oath that he had seen the senator in the chamber; but since the indictment and conviction of the Kansas senator he has not appeared in the chamber.
